

Seminary and Divinity School Day - October 28

SUBMITTED BY CASEY RAE REGNIER, STUDENT

Are you considering the idea of theological graduate school education? Is there a possibility you might want to become a pastor, a professor of religion, or work in a church-related vocation?

On Tuesday, October 28, gather with your peers for Seminary and Divinity School Day, a special day of discernment. The day includes several thought-provoking breakout sessions and the opportunity to meet with representatives from 18 top-notch seminaries and divinity schools from around the nation, from multiple denominational affiliations. The day will also feature a keynote luncheon address - "Where Next? Vocation as Path" by Marty Stortz, Bernhard M. Christensen Professor of Religion and Vocation.

Come and stop by the atrium anytime from 9:30 to 3:30, you don't have to be there the whole time to take part in the day.
